

WHY OUR MISSION MATTERS

Over 15% of Sacramento County residents have no medical insurance; another 20% are insured by Medi-Cal or the California Medically Indigent Services Program (CMISP). That totals to approximately 550,000 persons of all ages who are either uninsured or under-insured and who thus have limited access to quality health care options. Over 80% of these people are in working families and 12% of them are children or teens.

Some physician offices and medical groups will accept limited numbers of patients who are covered by Medi-Cal, but virtually none of them will accept uninsured patients. One option for uninsured persons and families who need medical care is to present at a hospital emergency room that is expensive and often inappropriate to meet longer term chronic conditions. The other option is to find a community clinic which specializes in care to the uninsured and under-insured. Here they will often find a greater range of care and be welcomed by a culturally competent staff of compassionate, caring healthcare professionals.

The CCHN network of clinics is currently able to provide a full continuum of competent, compassionate care to 50,000 men, women and children in Sacramento County. A quick glance at the numbers indicates that growth of this network is essential for the health of the regional society as a whole.

The CCHN is funded in part by The California Endowment, The California Wellness Foundation, The Tides Foundation, Catholic Health care West, and The California Primary Care Association
